

Having become acquainted with the design & character of the Lane Theological Seminary, we cheerfully recommend it to the benevolent as needing & deserving their liberal patronage. Its plan embraces a course of study similar to that of our best Theological Seminaries; its system of manual labor is well fitted for a new country, & its location in the heart of the west will afford peculiar facilities of usefulness throughout the whole extent of the great Western Valley. We therefore regard its object as one of common interest to all who feel the importance of systematic efforts to furnish the means of a thorough education for the christian ministry in the Western States.
